OPPOSITION.
Sir William Harcourt and the Earl

Sir William Harcourt and the Earl of Kimberley have done precisely what we thought they would do—they have yielded to the pressure of the extreme section of their own followers, and have gone over "bag and baggage" to the Helleno-maniaca. At Norwich, on Wednesday, both he and Lord Kimberley abandoned their relative reserve, and went for Lord Salisbury and his policy tooth and nail. With characteristic activations, however. That is to move a vote of cens upon the Government in the House Comment.

EAST ANGLIANS IN LONDON.
The annual dinner of the London.
Society of East Anglians was held last night at the Holborn Restaurant. The Earl of Strathbroke presided, and there were nearly 300 present, among them being the following East Anglians:—Mr. H. S. Foster, Mr. Cuthbert Quilter, Sir W. Pearson, Mr. F. W. Wilson, Mr. E. J. Price, and Mr. Courtenay Warner. The loyal toasts having been drunk amid much enthusiasm, Mr. C. S. Bead proposed that of East Anglia. He said that that part of the country was not hing without its agriculture, and even with it at present there was not much in it. (Laughter.) He spoke of the good work Mr. Chaplin, the popular Minister of Agriculture, was now doing for that industry, and went on to state that East Anglians were very proud of their native land; they were also proud of Great Britain. Cheeve.) There was, in his opinion, no county like Norfolk. (Laughter.) He was once told that Norfolk men ought to be proud of their native county because they were no good out of it. (Loud laughter.) He referred to the

If they had no glories in East Anglia, but the departed fragments of an historical past, they certainly had the knowledge that London was custained, invigorated, carried on, and maintained by the influx of genius, excellence, and power from East Anglia. (Loud laughter.)—Lord Stradbroke next proposed the "London Society of East Anglians." He said they all felt very grateful to those who were responsible for the formation of that society. Bast Anglians had always been of a RATHER WANDERING DISPOSITION.
Perhaps they inherited that spirit of wandering from those Novemens who settled in East Anglia in by-gone days, settled in East Anglia in by-gone days.

were not those openings for enter-prising spirits which so often occurred in large manufacturing counties. That society gave East Anglians from all parts of the world the opportunity of meeting together to talk over the old times and to bring to mind memories which were nearly forgotten. East Anglia had provided its fair share of the heroes who had done so much to build up the great empire. (Cheera.) He gave the .ames of various distin-guished military men, sailors, painters, &c., and pointed out that as far back as 1464 Sir E. Joslyn held the position of
